

Zetron Joins Institute Dedicated to Improving Mission-Critical Information Sharing

Zetron has joined the Integrated Justice Information Systems (IJIS) Institute, a nonprofit organization whose goal is to improve mission-critical information sharing across the private and public sectors.

Redmond, WA, U.S.A., September 6, 2013— Zetron, a leading provider of mission-critical communications solutions worldwide, recently became a member of the Integrated Justice Information Systems (IJIS) Institute, a nonprofit organization that unites the private and public sectors to improve mission-critical information sharing.

Institute members are information technology companies and consultancies that provide solutions to the justice, public-safety, and homeland security sectors. The IJIS Institute is the only national organization that brings together industry and government in an effort to improve national security and promote effective information sharing across all levels of the justice, public safety, and homeland security communities. The Institute also delivers services and facilitates programs that promote national information-technology standards.

“We joined the IJIS Institute because we feel it’s important to actively support its goal of improving information sharing and communication effectiveness across industries, agencies and jurisdictions,” said Zetron V.P. of Product Management, Kathy Broadwell. “We welcome the opportunity to share the knowledge Zetron has gained from its many years of providing mission-critical communication equipment to the public-safety market. We also look forward to working with and learning from the other respected companies in our industry that support the Institute and its mission.”

About Zetron

For over 30 years, Zetron has been providing mission-critical communications solutions to customers in public safety, transportation, utilities, manufacturing, healthcare and business. With offices in the U.S.A., U.K., Australia and numerous field locations, Zetron supports a worldwide network of resellers, system integrators and distributors. This gives Zetron a global reach as well as a local presence in the regions it serves. Zetron is a wholly owned subsidiary of JVC Kenwood Corporation.
